1. What is the primary purpose of a background check when purchasing a firearm from a licensed dealer in Alaska?

- A. To register the firearm
- B. To ensure the buyer is of legal age
- C. To verify the buyer has completed a firearms safety course
- D. To prevent prohibited persons from purchasing firearms

The primary purpose of a background check when purchasing a firearm from a licensed dealer in Alaska is to prevent prohibited persons from purchasing firearms. This involves screening the buyer's background to ensure they do not fall into any prohibited categories, such as having a felony conviction, domestic violence restraining order, or mental health adjudication that would disqualify them from owning or possessing firearms. It is an essential step in the gun purchasing process to help maintain public safety and prevent firearms from falling into the wrong hands. Option A is not the correct answer because, in Alaska, firearm registration is not required by law. Option B may be a factor in the background check process, but the primary purpose goes beyond just ensuring the legal age of the buyer. Option C is not typically a requirement in Alaska for purchasing a firearm from a licensed dealer, as completion of a firearms safety course is not mandatory for every purchase.

2. Which of the following is NOT a requirement to obtain an Alaska Concealed Handgun Permit?

- A. Being a U.S. citizen
- B. Completing a firearms training course
- C. Passing a written test
- D. Living in Alaska for a minimum of one year

To obtain an Alaska Concealed Handgun Permit, one does not need to have lived in Alaska for a minimum of one year. The other options are requirements to obtain the permit. Being a U.S. citizen, completing a firearms training course, and passing a written test are all necessary steps in the process of obtaining an Alaska Concealed Handgun Permit. Remember, residency requirements can vary by state for concealed carry permits.

3. What is the legal blood alcohol content limit while carrying a firearm in Alaska?

- A. 0.08%
- B. 0.00%
- C. 0.10%
- D. There is no specified limit

In Alaska, the legal blood alcohol content limit while carrying a firearm is 0.00%. This means that individuals are prohibited from carrying a firearm while under the influence of alcohol, regardless of whether they are below the commonly recognized legal driving limit of 0.08%. Firearms and alcohol do not mix well and can lead to dangerous situations, so it's important to always handle firearms responsibly and without impairment. Option A, which suggests a limit of 0.08%, is incorrect because the legal limit for carrying a firearm is more restrictive than the limit for driving under the influence. Option C, with a limit of 0.10%, is also incorrect for the same reason. Option D, stating that there is no specified limit, is incorrect as Alaska does have a specified limit of 0.00% for carrying a firearm.

4. Are background checks required for private gun sales in Alaska?

- A. Yes, for all sales
- B. No, they are not required
- C. Yes, but only for sales of handguns
- D. Yes, but only at gun shows

In Alaska, background checks are not required for private gun sales, making option B the correct answer. Unlike some other states, Alaska does not have specific laws mandating background checks for private sales between individuals. It is important for individuals in Alaska to be aware of this when engaging in private firearm transactions to ensure they are in compliance with state law. Option A is incorrect because background checks are not required for all sales in Alaska. Option C is incorrect because background checks are not only required for handgun sales. Option D is incorrect because background checks are not only required at gun shows in Alaska.

5. Can non-residents purchase firearms in Alaska?

- A. Yes, both handguns and long guns
- B. Yes, but only long guns
- C. No
- D. Yes, but they must have a permit

While it is technically possible for non-residents to purchase firearms in Alaska, this option is only available for long guns as specified in choice B. Choice D suggests that a permit is required for non-residents to buy firearms in Alaska, however this is not the case. Option C states that non-residents cannot purchase firearms in the state, which is incorrect. Therefore, the most accurate answer is A - both handguns and long guns can be purchased by non-residents in Alaska.

6. Is it legal to own a fully automatic weapon in Alaska?

- A. Yes, with no restrictions
- B. No, it is completely prohibited
- C. Yes, with a federal permit
- D. Only for law enforcement personnel

In Alaska, it is legal to own a fully automatic weapon with a federal permit. This means that individuals can legally possess fully automatic firearms under certain federal regulations and licensing requirements. Unlike options A, B, and D, the correct answer acknowledges the role of federal permits in allowing individuals to possess fully automatic weapons in the state of Alaska.

7. In Alaska, who is responsible for maintaining a record of all firearm sales?

- A. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives
- B. The Alaska Department of Public Safety
- C. The seller of the firearm
- D. No records are required to be kept

In Alaska, the correct answer is that the seller of the firearm is responsible for maintaining a record of all firearm sales. This record-keeping responsibility helps ensure accountability and traceability of firearms. By maintaining records of firearm sales, sellers can assist law enforcement in tracking firearms used in crimes or those that are illegally obtained. It is an essential part of responsible gun ownership and helps promote public safety.

8. Which of the following locations is it illegal to possess a firearm in Alaska?

- A. Courthouses
- B. Restaurants serving alcohol
- C. Public parks
- D. All of the above

In Alaska, it is illegal to possess a firearm in courthouses. This prohibition is in place to ensure the safety and security of all individuals in the courthouse environment. While firearms may be allowed in certain locations under specific circumstances in Alaska, possessing them in courthouses is strictly prohibited. Hence, the correct answer is A. Restaurants serving alcohol and public parks do not have the same level of restriction as courthouses in Alaska, making them incorrect choices in this context.

9. Are background checks required for private gun sales in Alaska?

- A. Yes, for all sales
- B. No
- C. Yes, but only for handguns
- D. Yes, but only at gun shows

In Alaska, background checks are only required for firearms purchased from licensed dealers. Private sales between individuals do not require a background check. Option A is incorrect because it states that all sales, including private sales, require a background check. Option C is incorrect because it specifies that only handgun sales require a background check, when in fact, all firearms purchased from licensed dealers require a background check. Option D is incorrect because it specifies that background checks are only necessary at gun shows, when in fact, they are required for all purchases from licensed dealers, whether at a gun show or not. Therefore, the correct answer is B, as there is no legal requirement for a background check on private gun sales in Alaska.

10. Which of these locations is it illegal to carry a firearm in Alaska?

- A. State parks
- B. Bars
- C. Places of worship
- D. Private vehicles

In Alaska, it is illegal to carry a firearm in bars. Carrying a firearm in establishments that primarily serve alcohol is prohibited to prevent incidents involving alcohol consumption and firearms, which may pose a risk to public safety. State parks, places of worship, and private vehicles are generally locations where individuals can legally carry firearms in Alaska, as long as they comply with state and federal laws regarding firearms possession and transportation.
