1. What is the mission of the Alpha Kappa Psi Foundation?

- A. Increasing chapter membership.
- B. Providing resources for enhancing the educational experience of future business leaders.
- C. Promoting social events for members.
- D. Managing the fraternity's financial investments.

The mission being tested is to provide resources that enhance the educational experience of future business leaders. The Alpha Kappa Psi Foundation is focused on supporting education and leadership development—through scholarships, grants, and programs that help students grow academically and professionally. This makes the option about offering educational resources the best fit, because it directly aligns with funding and facilitating opportunities that advance learning and leadership skills for members and prospective members. The other options describe activities more related to growing chapter membership, organizing social events, or managing the fraternity's investments—tasks that are not the Foundation's primary purpose.

2. Pathways aims to provide participants with what kind of knowledge?

- A. Public relations strategies
- B. Financial accounting and budgeting
- C. An intimate knowledge of servant leadership
- D. Event planning basics

Pathways is designed to develop leadership within members through a servant-leadership approach. It aims to give participants a deep understanding of leading by serving others, empowering teammates, acting ethically, and modeling accountability in both chapter life and professional settings. This focus makes the option describing intimate knowledge of servant leadership the best fit. While modules may cover practical topics like public relations, accounting, or event planning, those are tools to support leadership work rather than the central aim of Pathways.

3. Who voted to remove the restrictive clause restricting membership to only Christian Men of the Caucasian race?

- A. The Alumni Association Chairs
- B. The National Membership Committee
- C. The Fraternity's Executive Council
- D. The Chapter Congress Delegates

The main concept here is who has the authority to change the fraternity's governing documents, such as removing a discriminatory membership clause. The Chapter Congress Delegates are the official legislative body that represents all chapters and votes on amendments to the Constitution and Bylaws. Because this change alters the character of membership rules at the national level, it requires the delegates' approval, ensuring broad, chapter-wide consensus rather than a decision by a single officer or a committee. Other groups may propose changes or influence policy, but they don't have the final mandate to amend the governing documents. So, the Chapter Congress Delegates voted to remove the restrictive clause.

4. Who makes up the chapter congress?

- A. All active chapters' presidents
- B. Delegates elected by the board of directors
- C. One delegate from each student and alumni chapter in good standing
- D. Only alumni chapter representatives

The idea behind the Chapter Congress is representation: every active student or alumni chapter that is in good standing sends one delegate to the congress. This single delegate from each chapter ensures that each chapter has an equal voice in decisions, regardless of the chapter's size, and it includes both student and alumni chapters so that alumni perspectives are represented too. The good-standing requirement keeps participation limited to chapters meeting their obligations, such as dues, reporting, and adherence to policies. If the structure were just the presidents, or delegates chosen by the board, or limited to alumni representatives, it would tilt influence away from the broader chapters or exclude student chapters, respectively. The one-delegate-per-chapter rule keeps the process collaborative and balanced.

5. Which of the following is part of the management team's responsibilities?

- A. Handling the fraternity's external marketing campaigns
- B. Negotiating with vendors for contracts
- C. Serving the chapter with guidelines and policies and procedures set forth by the board of directors
- D. Managing day-to-day financial audits

The main idea here is how governance and daily operations align in a fraternity: the management team is responsible for running the chapter according to the rules and procedures established by the board of directors. That means they implement and enforce guidelines, policies, and procedures that the board sets, ensuring the chapter operates consistently and in line with the board's directions. External marketing campaigns are typically handled by a marketing or communications function, possibly with guidance but not the core duty of the management team. Negotiating with vendors for contracts is more of a purchasing or operations task, often delegated to specific committees or officers responsible for finance and administration. Managing day-to-day financial audits belongs to the financial oversight function, such as the treasurer and any internal audit processes, rather than the management team as a whole. So, the option that matches the management team's role is serving the chapter with guidelines and policies and procedures set forth by the board of directors.

6. What are AKPsi's official colors?

- A. Gold And Crimson
- B. Gold And Navy Blue
- C. Navy Blue And White
- D. Gold And Black

AKPsi's official colors are gold and navy blue. These colors are defined in the fraternity's branding standards and appear on the crest, insignia, pins, and official materials used by chapters nationwide. The pairing conveys the organization's identity and professional image, with gold signaling achievement and excellence and navy blue representing trust and loyalty. While chapters may incorporate other color accents for events or merchandise, the nationally recognized official palette is gold and navy blue.

7. What does Integrity mean?

- A. Actions are guided by personal gain.
- B. All actions, whether in business or in life, are guided by honesty, ethics, and fairness.
- C. Ethics are optional.
- D. Fairness is secondary to loyalty.

Integrity means acting with honesty, ethics, and fairness in all aspects of life, not just when it's easy or convenient. It's about aligning what you do with the commitments and values you claim to hold, and doing the right thing even when no one is watching. In both business and fraternal contexts, integrity earns trust because others can rely on you to be honest, follow through on what you say, and treat people fairly. The idea that ethics are optional, or that personal gain should guide actions, or that loyalty can make fairness secondary, would undermine that trust and consistency. So the statement that actions, whether in business or life, are guided by honesty, ethics, and fairness best reflects what integrity is.

8. Which of the following is not a core value of Alpha Kappa Psi?

- A. Brotherhood
- B. Unity
- C. Knowledge
- D. Excellence

Alpha Kappa Psi is built around a defined set of values that guide members in how they interact and grow. Among those, Brotherhood, Unity, and Knowledge are clearly listed as core values, shaping the fraternity's emphasis on mutual support, teamwork, and learning. Excellence, while admirable and often pursued in any professional setting, is not listed as a core value in AKPsi's official values. So the best choice is Excellence because it is not part of the formal guiding principles the fraternity promotes.

9. To whom is the fraternal pledge induction fee sent?

- A. The Fraternity Staff
- B. The Chapter Congress
- C. The Fraternity Board of Directors
- D. The Diary Editorial Board

Pledge induction fees are handled at the national level to keep tracking and processing consistent across all chapters. The Fraternity Staff, based at the Fraternity's national office, is responsible for collecting and accounting for these fees, ensuring proper records and smooth administration for pledges everywhere. The Chapter Congress is a body of delegates from chapters focusing on governance at a larger level, not on collecting individual pledge payments. The Fraternity Board of Directors sets policy and oversight, not routine financial intake, and the Diary Editorial Board isn't involved in pledge finances. So the fee goes to the Fraternity Staff.

10. How long are board terms?

- A. 1 year
- B. 2 years
- C. 3 years
- D. 5 years

Board terms are measured in years and the standard duration for Alpha Kappa Psi's national Board of Directors is three years. This length provides enough time to carry out initiatives and maintain continuity, while still allowing regular opportunities for fresh leadership and new ideas. To keep the board functioning smoothly, terms are typically staggered so not all seats turn over at once, ensuring Institutional memory remains strong from year to year. Shorter terms would lead to more frequent leadership changes and potential disruption, while longer terms could slow needed renewal. So, the three-year term is chosen to balance stability with ongoing renewal.
