Explanations

SAMPLE

1. The common term for Murphy's type of battlefield leadership example?

- A. Improvisational leadership
- B. Command presence under pressure
- C. Tactical improvisation
- D. Courage under fire

This item tests how battlefield leadership is described when a leader operates under direct enemy fire. Murphy's actions show stepping into danger, keeping troops organized, and making decisive moves while under intense exposure. That combination—the willingness to act with valor under direct threat and to guide others through the chaos—embodies what "courage under fire" means. It captures not just bravery, but the leadership impact of sustaining composure, risking self, and inspiring the unit to continue fighting. The other terms point to related ideas but not the same core attribute. Improvisational leadership and tactical improvisation focus on making up plans on the fly and adapting tactics, which are about flexibility more than the personal act of facing danger. Command presence under pressure highlights demeanor and authority under stress, but doesn't specifically emphasize leading through direct enemy fire and risking oneself for the group.

2. Murphy's legacy has influenced American culture in which field most prominently?

- A. Military history and cinema/biography of war heroes
- B. Fine arts
- C. Culinary arts
- D. Space exploration

*Murphy's impact lives at the intersection of battlefield memory and how war heroes are portrayed in media. His extraordinary service and Medal of Honor recognition anchor military history discussions, because he represents a defining example of frontline valor. Then, his postwar life as an actor who portrayed war experiences—most famously in To Hell and Back—gave the public a highly recognizable cinematic and biographical portrayal of a WWII soldier. That combination—a real-life hero who becomes a film figure—made his influence feel most strongly in how military history is remembered and how war heroes are depicted in cinema and biographies. It's far less about fine arts, culinary arts, or space exploration, so this field stands out as the most prominent area of his cultural legacy.*

3. What is honorable service?

- A. To defend the homeland at all costs
- B. Support and defense of the constitution
- C. Providing medical care
- D. Serving in combat roles only

Honorable service means upholding the oath to support and defend the Constitution. When service members raise their right hand, they promise to protect the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and to follow lawful orders. So, honorable service is about acting with integrity and loyalty to that constitutional duty in every duty you perform, whether in combat, medical support, or other roles, as long as your actions align with the law and citizens' rights. The defense of the Constitution anchors what makes service honorable, not simply the pursuit of fighting a war, providing care, or focusing on one type of assignment. The idea that service is defined by defending the homeland at all costs is too narrow and potentially conflicting with lawful limits and rights; medical care describes a role, not the overarching obligation; and limiting service to combat roles ignores the broad responsibilities all service members take on in support of constitutional principles.

4. What is a warfighting function?

- A. A planned sequence of operations
- B. Group of tasks and systems commanders use to accomplish a mission
- C. A battlefield procedure
- D. A legal framework for engagement

Warfighting functions are groups of related tasks and the systems that enable them, organized so a commander can plan, synchronize, and execute operations to accomplish a mission. This framing isn't about a single operation, a battlefield procedure, or a legal framework for engagement. Instead, it provides the way to marshal and coordinate fighting power across essential areas, such as how forces move and maneuver, how fires are delivered, how intelligence and information support decision-making, how forces are protected, how sustainment keeps supply and readiness, and how command and control ties everything together. By thinking in these function groups, a commander can identify gaps, allocate resources, and ensure all critical tasks are covered to achieve the mission. That's why this option best captures what a warfighting function is.

5. What does AFAP stand for?

- A. Army Family Action Plan
- B. Army Family Assistance Program
- C. Army Fiscal and Administrative Plan
- D. Army Fitness and Advantage Plan

AFAP stands for Army Family Action Plan. It's the Army's formal, bottom-up process for improving soldiers' and families' quality of life by identifying issues at the installation level, prioritizing them, and turning them into actionable proposals that leadership can implement. The aim is to address concerns that affect readiness and welfare, such as housing, childcare, or community services, through a structured cycle of input, review, and policy change. Other-sounding options may resemble real programs, but they do not reflect the established meaning of AFAP.

6. Stewardship of the profession emphasizes caring for people and other resources entrusted by whom?

- A. The American peoples
- B. The International Red Cross
- C. The Department of Defense
- D. The Army civilian employees only

Stewardship of the profession means looking after people and the resources that others place in your care. The resources—time, talents, equipment, information, and the public trust—belong to the American people, the citizens who fund and rely on the military to protect them. So caring for personnel and material is done on behalf of those who grant that trust: the American people. This perspective emphasizes accountability, ethical conduct, and service to the public, not just to a particular organization or a narrow group. The other options miss that broader obligation: the International Red Cross is a separate humanitarian organization, the Department of Defense is the umbrella institution rather than the beneficiaries, and Army civilian employees only is too narrow a focus.

7. The 6th XVIII Airborne Policy Letter covers which topic?

- A. XVIII Airborne operations
- B. Establishment of the armed forces disciplinary control board
- C. Automatic Drug and alcohol separation offenses
- D. Possession of drugs and underage drinking

Disciplinary governance within the XVIII Airborne community is what this policy item tests. The sixth policy letter establishes the armed forces disciplinary control board, the body charged with overseeing disciplinary actions, standardizing processes, and ensuring due process across personnel. That focus on creating and empowering a formal mechanism for discipline is why this option is the best fit—the letter is about setting up the board and its authority, not about performing operations or detailing specific offenses. The other topics describe actions or offenses that would be covered in different guidance, not in this disciplinary-oversight letter.

8. The Medal of Honor is presented by which authority?

- A. The Secretary of Defense
- B. The President, in the name of Congress
- C. The Vice President
- D. The Speaker of the House

The Medal of Honor is presented by the President of the United States, in the name of Congress. This highest military decoration was established by acts of Congress, and the President bears the responsibility of awarding it as the representative of Congress. Therefore, the ceremony is conducted by the President, not by the Secretary of Defense, the Vice President, or the Speaker of the House.

9. Murphy's MOH action occurred during which part of WWII in Europe?

- A. The late European campaigns (Alsace, 1945)
- B. The North African campaigns
- C. The Italian Campaign 1943-44
- D. The Battle of Britain

Audie Murphy's Medal of Honor action happened during the late European campaigns in Alsace, 1945. The event occurred on January 26, 1945 near Holtzwihr, France, as Allied forces were driving through the Colmar Pocket and pushing toward Germany. In the attack, he held off a German force for about an hour and, after his unit's armor was knocked out, mounted a burning M10 tank destroyer and used its .50-caliber gun to repel the attackers, then helped lead a counterattack. This puts the action squarely in the Alsace campaign late in World War II, after the North African and Italian campaigns and well after the Battle of Britain.

10. The Medal of Honor is the highest decoration awarded by which country?

A. United Kingdom

B. Canada

C. United States

D. Germany

This question tests understanding of which country bestows its highest military decoration called the Medal of Honor. The Medal of Honor is the United States' highest military decoration, established during the Civil War era and awarded by the President in the name of the United States for acts of conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty in armed conflict. It is uniquely American, reflecting the U.S. government's authority and ceremonial process for recognizing extraordinary valor. Other countries have their own top awards—such as the United Kingdom's Victoria Cross and Canada's highest honors—so the Medal of Honor specifically identifies the United States.
