1. What does the wine represent in the context of the Lord's Supper?

- A. The blood of the Old Testament saints
- B. The new beginnings
- C. The blood of Christ
- D. The festive joy of fellowship

In the context of the Lord's Supper, the wine symbolizes the blood of Christ, which is a central theme in Christian theology. During the Last Supper, Christ used bread and wine to institute the sacrament, instructing His followers to partake in remembrance of Him. The wine serves as a powerful representation of Christ's sacrificial death, which provides redemption and forgiveness of sins for believers. This element is deeply rooted in the New Testament, particularly in the Gospels, where Jesus explicitly states that the wine is His blood, shed for the forgiveness of sins. The significance of the wine transforms the act of communion into a solemn and reflective acknowledgment of the covenant established through Christ's sacrifice. By partaking in the wine, participants are reminded of the gravity of Christ's sacrifice and the new covenant established between God and humanity. This understanding fosters a sense of reverence and connection to the sacrifice that lies at the core of Christian faith.

2. What did the entire Adamic race die in?

- A. Sin; action
- B. Trespases; sins
- C. Denial; despair
- D. Corruption; doubt

The entire Adamic race is considered to have died in "trespases; sins" based on theological interpretations of the doctrine of original sin. This concept, rooted in the Biblical narrative of Adam and Eve's disobedience in the Garden of Eden, suggests that through their choice to sin, they brought about spiritual death not only to themselves but also to all humanity. In Christian theology, particularly as expressed in texts like Romans 5:12, the entry of sin into the world through one man (Adam) resulted in death spreading to all people. This underscores the belief that the consequence of Adam's disobedience is a fundamental separation from God, resulting in a state of sinfulness for all descendants, often referred to as the Adamic race. The terms "trespases" and "sins" both encapsulate the nature of this spiritual death, reflecting not just the act of disobedience, but the ongoing condition of humanity's fallen state. This understanding is crucial in discussions of redemption and salvation, emphasizing the importance of reconciling with God through Christ, who offers restoration from that death. Other options imply a different nature of death or suffering that does not align with the prevailing theological perspective concerning sin and humanity's spiritual condition post

3. When was the first General Assembly of the Church of God held?

- A. 1905
- B. 1906
- C. 1907
- D. 1908

The first General Assembly of the Church of God was held in 1906, marking a significant event in the denomination's history. This assembly was pivotal because it brought together church leaders and members to establish foundational doctrines, organizational structures, and a sense of unity among the growing movement. The gathering also solidified the Church of God's identity and mission, allowing it to address the needs of its congregants and engage more effectively in evangelism and community service. The year 1906 is thus recognized as a cornerstone year that set the stage for the development and expansion of the Church of God in the years to come.

4. Who advises the International Executive Committee on issues of international concern?

- A. Director of World Missions
- B. International Council
- C. State Overseer
- D. Missionary Advisory Group

The correct choice highlights the role of the International Council in advising the International Executive Committee on issues of international concern. The International Council typically comprises leaders from various regions and oversees matters that affect the global church, ensuring that diverse perspectives are considered in decision-making processes. This advisory function is crucial as it allows the council to bring forth insights that reflect the needs and challenges faced by congregations worldwide. By synthesizing input from different areas, the International Council can provide knowledgeable recommendations regarding initiatives, policies, and strategies that resonate across cultural and geographical boundaries, thus promoting unity and effective action within the broader organization. While other entities like the Director of World Missions and the Missionary Advisory Group play important roles in ministry and operational aspects of missions, they do not specifically carry the broader advisory responsibility that the International Council has toward the International Executive Committee. The State Overseer, while influential at a local level, does not typically engage with international matters to the same extent as the International Council.

5. The Church of God's doctrines and teachings emphasize what aspect of Christian life?

- A. Individualism
- B. Community responsibility
- C. Financial wealth
- D. Isolation from society

The correct answer emphasizes community responsibility as a fundamental aspect of Christian life according to the Church of God teachings. This reflects the belief that Christians are called to engage with and support one another within a community framework. The teachings encourage believers to work together, share resources, and support those in need, fostering a sense of unity and collective responsibility. Within this perspective, the Church of God underscores the importance of love, fellowship, and accountability among members. It promotes active engagement in social and spiritual support, allowing believers to live out their faith in practical ways that benefit the community. This contrasts with teachings that may focus solely on individual achievements or personal isolation from societal issues. Community responsibility aligns with the teachings found in the New Testament, where believers are encouraged to care for one another, serve their neighbors, and embody the principles of compassion and mutual aid. Through this lens, the Church of God encourages a holistic approach to living out one's faith that extends beyond the self to encompass the broader community.

6. _____ to share their faith emphasizes evangelism.

- A. Encouragement
- B. Training people
- C. Prayer
- D. Preaching

The focus on training people to share their faith emphasizes the importance of equipping individuals with the knowledge, skills, and confidence necessary to engage in evangelism effectively. This training can include teaching individuals about the tenets of their faith, helping them develop a personal testimony, and providing strategies for effectively communicating their beliefs to others. When individuals are trained, they are more likely to understand their faith deeply, which allows them to articulate it clearly to others. This comprehensive approach helps create ambassadors of faith who can thoughtfully and compassionately engage in conversations about their beliefs, address questions or concerns that others might have, and ultimately lead others to a personal relationship with God. Although encouragement, prayer, and preaching can also play significant roles in evangelism, training provides the foundational support needed for individuals to feel prepared and capable of sharing their faith confidently. Therefore, emphasizing the training of people aligns directly with the goal of expanding evangelistic efforts within the Church of God.

7. When parents dedicate their child to God, they are making a commitment to do what?

- A. Provide material wealth
- B. Pledge to rear the child before God
- C. Ensure academic success
- D. Attend church regularly

When parents dedicate their child to God, they are making a commitment to rear the child before God. This act symbolizes their intention to raise the child in alignment with their faith, instilling spiritual values and teachings that reflect their beliefs and connection to God. This dedication often signifies that parents will strive to guide their child in a way that promotes spiritual growth, moral integrity, and a relationship with God throughout the child's life. This commitment encompasses providing a nurturing environment where the child can learn and develop spiritually, emotionally, and morally. It emphasizes the role of parents as spiritual leaders in their child's life, encouraging them to walk in faith and understanding the principles of their religious teachings. The act of dedicating a child is not solely about the child's needs or material provisions but is fundamentally rooted in the spiritual responsibilities that parents undertake. This commitment fosters a deeper relationship with God and community, essential aspects of many faith traditions.

8. How does the minister influence the future direction of the church?

- A. By managing resources efficiently
- B. By guiding and directing the church
- C. By leading prayer meetings
- D. By setting strict guidelines

Guiding and directing the church is fundamental for a minister's role in influencing its future direction. A minister plays a pivotal role in shaping the vision, mission, and overall strategy of the church community. This leadership involves not only preaching and teaching but also facilitating decision-making processes that align with the church's core values and beliefs. By providing spiritual guidance, a minister helps members of the congregation understand their roles within the church and encourages them to pursue collective goals that promote growth and unity. This can involve empowering lay leaders, encouraging outreach programs, and fostering an environment where members feel spiritually nurtured and inspired to take on leadership roles themselves. The other options, while important, do not capture the broad and impactful influence that ministerial guidance holds. Efficient management of resources is necessary for a church's operation, but it doesn't directly shape its future direction in the spiritual or doctrinal sense. Leading prayer meetings is significant for community building and spiritual health, yet it is just one aspect of a minister's responsibilities. Setting strict guidelines might create structure, but it could also stifle creativity and engagement, which are essential for a thriving church. Overall, the act of guiding and directing encompasses various aspects of church leadership, making it the most comprehensive answer regarding a minister

9. It is important for a church to know its own what?

- A. History
- B. Distinctive style
- C. Geographic location
- D. Membership numbers

Understanding the distinctive style of a church is vital because it embodies the unique theological perspectives, practices, and cultural expressions that set it apart from other congregations. This distinctive style informs how the church conducts its worship services, engages with the community, and communicates its message. Recognizing and embracing this uniqueness can help the church attract like-minded individuals and provide a clear identity to its members, fostering a sense of belonging and purpose. In addition to its effective outreach and ministry, knowing its distinctive style allows the church to remain authentic in its mission while adapting to the needs of the community it serves. This clarity can also aid in teaching and discipleship, ensuring that all members understand and participate in the church's distinct mission in a cohesive way.

10. Which three administrative functions are essential for making a ministry vision a reality?

- A. Selecting personnel, establishing a budget, conducting outreach
- B. Identifying ministry plans, selecting personnel, establishing a budget
- C. Recruiting volunteers, identifying ministry goals, handling finances
- D. Planning events, selecting personnel, establishing a mission

The correct choice highlights essential administrative functions that are critical for realizing a ministry vision. Identifying ministry plans involves determining the goals and strategies that will guide the ministry. This step is foundational as it sets the direction and objectives that the ministry aims to achieve, ensuring that efforts are aligned with a clear vision. Selecting personnel is also crucial, as having the right people in place is necessary for executing the ministry plans effectively. The right team members contribute their skills, passion, and commitment, which are vital for fostering a successful ministry environment. Establishing a budget is another essential function, as it provides the financial framework necessary to implement the identified ministry plans. With a well-structured budget, resources can be allocated appropriately, ensuring that the ministry can sustain its activities and initiatives within its financial means. These three functions—identifying ministry plans, selecting personnel, and establishing a budget—work together to create a strong administrative foundation, allowing the ministry vision to be translated into actionable steps and practical outcomes.
