Explanations

1. In New Jersey, are armor-piercing bullets legal?

- A. Yes, for military and police use
- B. Yes, for everyone
- C. No, they are illegal
- D. Yes, but only with special permission from the state

Armor-piercing bullets are designed to penetrate body armor and cause significant damage. Therefore, they are considered dangerous and are strictly regulated in most states, including New Jersey. This means they are not legal for anyone to purchase or possess, regardless of their intended use. Option A is incorrect as it implies that only certain groups can access armor-piercing bullets, when in fact they are illegal for everyone. Option B is also incorrect because it suggests that anyone can use these bullets, which is not the case. Option D is also not correct as special permission from the state is not enough to make the possession or use of armor-piercing bullets legal. Option C is the correct answer as it accurately reflects the current laws in New Jersey regarding armor-piercing bullets.

2. What kind of firearms safety training is required to obtain a Firearms Purchaser Identification Card in New Jersey?

- A. No training is required
- B. Online safety course
- C. NRA firearms safety course
- D. State-approved firearms safety course

In New Jersey, obtaining a Firearms Purchaser Identification Card does not require the completion of specific firearms safety training prior to application. However, it is recognized that responsible gun ownership includes an understanding of safety practices. Therefore, while a specific state-approved safety course is not mandatory for obtaining the card, having training in firearms safety is highly recommended for anyone who intends to possess a firearm. This option emphasizes the importance of proper training and education in firearms safety as a foundation for responsible ownership, reflecting New Jersey's commitment to public safety.

3. Are hollow-point bullets legal in New Jersey?

- A. Yes, without restrictions
- B. No
- C. Yes, but only for home defense
- D. Yes, but only for law enforcement officers

Hollow-point bullets are indeed legal in New Jersey, but there are specific restrictions regarding their use that make this particularly relevant to your answer. In New Jersey, residents may possess hollow-point ammunition for home defense, provided they possess a valid firearms identification card or a permit to carry. This regulation emphasizes the intended use of hollow-point bullets for self-defense scenarios within the home. While other forms of ammunition may be more broadly accessible, the state has placed limitations on hollow-point ammo, reflecting a balance between personal defense rights and public safety considerations. This is why the notion of their legality being limited to home defense specifically aligns with the state's legislative framework around firearms and ammunition.

4. Can individuals convicted of a crime possess a firearm in New Jersey?

- A. Yes, after 5 years
- B. Yes, but only at home
- C. No, not under any circumstances
- D. Yes, if it's a non-violent crime

In New Jersey, individuals convicted of a crime are generally prohibited from possessing firearms. This restriction applies to individuals who have been convicted of a felony, as well as many serious misdemeanors. The state's strict gun laws seek to enhance public safety by limiting access to firearms for those who may pose a risk due to past criminal behavior. As a result, the correct understanding of this law is that possession of a firearm is not permitted under any circumstances for those with such convictions. The other options suggest scenarios where firearm possession might be permitted after certain conditions are met, but these do not align with New Jersey's stringent regulations regarding firearm possession for individuals with criminal convictions.

5. What is the age requirement for obtaining a Firearms Purchaser Identification Card in New Jersey?

- A. 18 years of age
- B. 21 years of age
- C. 16 years of age
- D. 25 years of age

The correct age requirement for obtaining a Firearms Purchaser Identification Card in New Jersey is 18 years of age. This regulation is in place to ensure that individuals are at a legal age to apply for and possess firearms. At 18, individuals are considered adults in many legal capacities, allowing them to take on responsibilities like purchasing firearms, subject to compliance with additional laws and regulations. In New Jersey, while the minimum age is set at 18 for the Firearms Purchaser Identification Card, various requirements and restrictions apply, including background checks and other stipulations designed to promote public safety.

6. How is a 'justifiable need' to carry a handgun demonstrated in New Jersey?

- A. By passing a shooting proficiency test
- B. Specific threats or previous attacks
- C. A statement of fear for personal safety
- D. Completion of a firearm safety course

The concept of 'justifiable need' in New Jersey revolves around demonstrating a legitimate reason for wanting to carry a handgun in public. This is primarily established by documenting specific threats or past incidents of attacks against an individual. Such evidence shows that the person faces a realistic and identifiable danger that warrants the need for carrying a handgun for self-defense purposes. While other options address aspects of firearm training or personal feelings of safety, they do not meet the state's stringent requirements for justifiable need. Merely stating a fear for personal safety or having completed a safety course does not sufficiently prove that an individual has a compelling reason to carry a handgun in the state. Thus, the correct focus is on documented threats or prior attacks, as these factors align with New Jersey's legal framework for handgun carry permits.

7. Where must firearms be kept when not in use in New Jersey?

- A. In a locked cabinet
- B. With a trigger lock
- C. Both A and B are correct
- D. No specific requirement

The correct answer is that both options are required for safely storing firearms when they are not in use. In New Jersey, the law mandates that firearms must be stored in a manner that prevents access by unauthorized individuals, particularly children. This can be achieved by keeping firearms in a locked cabinet, which offers physical security against unauthorized access. Additionally, employing a trigger lock ensures that the firearm cannot be fired even if someone accesses it. Combining these methods enhances safety by addressing both storage security and the potential operational readiness of the firearm. Therefore, the requirement to both lock firearms away and utilize trigger locks aligns with New Jersey's comprehensive approach to firearm safety and responsible ownership. Storing firearms properly helps mitigate risks related to accidental discharges or unauthorized use. This dual requirement is reflective of a strong emphasis on the safety of the community and those living within it.

8. Is a permit required to purchase a shotgun in New Jersey?

- A. Yes
- B. No
- C. Only for semi-automatic shotguns
- D. Only for residents of other states

A permit is required to purchase any type of firearm in New Jersey, including a shotgun. Choices B, C, and D are incorrect because state law requires a permit for all firearm purchases, regardless of the type of firearm or the residency of the purchaser. Therefore, the only correct answer is A.

9. How does New Jersey categorize an 'assault firearm'?

- A. Any semi-automatic rifle
- B. Firearms with specific military-style features
- C. All handguns with a high-capacity magazine
- D. All of the above

New Jersey categorizes an 'assault firearm' specifically based on firearms that possess certain military-style features. This definition includes criteria such as the presence of a detachable magazine, a pistol grip, a folding or telescoping stock, and other attributes that give the firearm characteristics associated with military weapons. The state's focus on these design features aims to regulate firearms that are considered more dangerous due to their capacity for rapid fire and adaptability for military use. While semi-automatic rifles are mentioned, not all semi-automatic rifles are classified as assault firearms under New Jersey law; only those with specific features. High-capacity magazines are also regulated, but not all handguns with such magazines qualify as assault firearms unless they meet the additional criteria set forth by the law. Thus, the categorization is specific to the features defined in state regulations rather than a broader interpretation.

10. How often must a Firearms Purchaser Identification Card be renewed?

- A. Every 2 years
- B. Every 4 years
- C. It does not expire
- D. Every 10 years

The correct answer is that a Firearms Purchaser Identification Card does not expire. In New Jersey, once a person obtains this card, it remains valid indefinitely as long as it is not revoked due to legal reasons, such as a criminal conviction or mental health issue. This contrasts with other types of permits or licenses that commonly have specific expiration periods and require renewal to ensure ongoing eligibility. In this case, the perpetual validity of the Firearms Purchaser Identification Card reflects New Jersey's approach to responsible firearm ownership while still maintaining oversight and regulation in other areas.
