How to Use This Guide

This guide is designed to help you study more effectively and approach your exam with confidence. Whether you're reviewing for the first time or doing a final refresh, here's how to get the most out of your Examzify study guide:

1. Start with a Diagnostic Review

Skim through the questions to get a sense of what you know and what you need to focus on. Your goal is to identify knowledge gaps early.

2. Study in Short, Focused Sessions

Break your study time into manageable blocks (e.g. 30 - 45 minutes). Review a handful of questions, reflect on the explanations.

3. Learn from the Explanations

After answering a question, always read the explanation, even if you got it right. It reinforces key points, corrects misunderstandings, and teaches subtle distinctions between similar answers.

4. Track Your Progress

Use bookmarks or notes (if reading digitally) to mark difficult questions. Revisit these regularly and track improvements over time.

5. Simulate the Real Exam

Once you're comfortable, try taking a full set of questions without pausing. Set a timer and simulate test-day conditions to build confidence and time management skills.

6. Repeat and Review

Don't just study once, repetition builds retention. Re-attempt questions after a few days and revisit explanations to reinforce learning. Pair this guide with other Examzify tools like flashcards, and digital practice tests to strengthen your preparation across formats.

There's no single right way to study, but consistent, thoughtful effort always wins. Use this guide flexibly, adapt the tips above to fit your pace and learning style. You've got this!

Explanations

1. Which of the following is NOT listed among the five leading causes of death in the United States today?

- A. Heart disease
- B. Cancer
- C. Lung infection
- D. Accidents

The question tests your knowledge of which health issues top the death statistics in the United States. The leading causes are chronic diseases and major injuries, with heart disease and cancer at the top, followed by chronic lower respiratory diseases, stroke, and unintentional injuries (accidents). A lung infection, such as pneumonia, is not part of that top group. In official data, infections like pneumonia and influenza are categorized separately and usually rank lower than the top five. So the option describing a lung infection is not among the five leading causes.

2. Which category includes weapons and drugs according to the material?

- A. Illegal contraband
- B. Legal contraband
- C. Special/unusual
- D. Evidence

Contraband means items that are prohibited to possess in a given setting. Weapons and drugs are classic examples of things that are illegal to possess without authorization, so they fit the category of illegal contraband. This category covers items forbidden by law or policy in the environment you're studying. Legal contraband would involve items that could be contraband only in certain contexts or with permission; special/unusual isn't a standard category for this, and evidence refers to items tied to a crime that may be seized for use in a case, not the general classification of the item. So the best choice is illegal contraband.

3. How many judicial districts are there in New York State?

- A. 12
- B. 13
- C. 14
- D. 15

New York State organizes the Supreme Court, the trial-level court, into geographic Judicial Districts. There are thirteen of these districts in total, numbered I through XIII, and each district covers a group of counties to handle cases within that region. This structure is why the correct count is thirteen, not twelve, fourteen, or fifteen.

4. Which test result can be the only sign of latent TB infection?

- A. Positive skin test
- B. Chest X-ray changes
- C. Fever
- D. Cough

Latent TB infection means the person is infected with TB bacteria but has no symptoms and no contagious disease. The only sign you might see without illness is an immunologic reaction to TB antigens. A positive tuberculin skin test shows that the immune system has been sensitized to TB and indicates infection, which is consistent with latent TB when there are no symptoms and the chest X-ray is normal. Fever or cough are symptoms of active TB, and chest X-ray changes usually reflect active disease or older TB lesions, not latent infection. So the positive skin test is the sign that can indicate latent TB infection by itself.

5. Exceptions for security screening: Which groups are exempt?

- A. Members of the public
- B. Vendors and contractors
- C. Employees, Attorneys, Judges, Law enforcement officials
- D. Family members of staff

Security screening exemptions are given to those who have official roles inside the building and need uninterrupted access for operations. Members of the group that includes employees, attorneys, judges, and law enforcement officials have legitimate duties that require entering and moving through restricted areas without delays, so they typically bypass the standard screening while still using their credentials and following any targeted checks. In contrast, ordinary members of the public, vendors and contractors, and family members of staff are visitors who do not have the same authorized access, so they generally go through the usual screening process to maintain safety and security.

6. Muscle strength is defined as which type of strength?

- A. Absolute strength
- B. Endurance strength
- C. Relative strength
- D. Power

Muscle strength, in this context, is the maximum force a muscle can produce in a single peak effort. This is absolute strength—the amount of force independent of body size. Endurance strength relates to sustaining force over repetitions or time, relative strength is the same force adjusted for body weight, and power is force applied quickly (work per unit time). So the best description is absolute strength, the maximal single-effort force a muscle can generate. A practical measure of this is the one-repetition maximum test.

7. Which statement is true about security screening policy as it relates to exceptions?

- A. It excludes all exceptions
- B. It explicitly lists exceptions for employees, attorneys, judges, and law enforcement officials
- C. It includes vendors only
- D. It includes visitors and volunteers

Security screening policies often set aside certain people from the usual screening process because they have official duties or trusted roles. The correct statement reflects that the policy explicitly names who is exempt, including employees, attorneys, judges, and law enforcement officials. Having a defined list helps ensure these essential individuals can perform their duties without unnecessary delays while preserving overall security. Saying there are no exemptions is inaccurate, and narrowing exemptions only to vendors or only to visitors and volunteers misses other legitimate groups that commonly require access.

8. Which option is NOT listed as a screening device in the material?

- A. Magnetometers
- B. X-ray machines
- C. Hand scanners
- D. Metal detectors

The question is asking which screening devices are described in the material. The material lists magnetometers, X-ray machines, and hand scanners as screening tools, while metal detectors are not included in that list. Each listed device serves a different screening approach: magnetometers detect magnetic disturbances to reveal metal items, X-ray machines inspect the contents of bags or packages, and handheld scanners provide portable checks. Since metal detectors aren't mentioned in the material, that option is the one that doesn't fit.

9. Which statement about consent searches is correct?

- A. Searches performed without consent
- B. Searches conducted with a warrant
- C. Knowingly agreeing and consenting to a search
- D. Searches by random selection

Consent searches rely on a person voluntarily allowing a search after understanding what they're agreeing to. The correct statement captures that idea: a search is based on knowingly agreeing and consenting to it. For that consent to be valid, the person giving permission must understand the nature and scope of the search and must do so freely, without coercion or deceit. The person also must have the authority to grant that consent (for example, the property owner or someone federally authorized to give permission). If consent is obtained through pressure, misrepresentation, or from someone who lacks authority, the search may be unlawful. The other options describe searches based on no consent, a warrant, or random selection, which are not consent searches.

10. Who is responsible for enforcing court decorum during proceedings?

- A. The judge
- B. The plaintiff
- C. The defense attorney
- D. The stenographer

The judge is responsible for enforcing decorum in court. The judge presides over proceedings, sets the rules of conduct, and has the authority to admonish, warn, or sanction anyone who disrupts the process. This ensures everyone has a fair opportunity to be heard and that the proceedings stay orderly. While lawyers must conduct themselves professionally and may be cautioned by the judge, they do not enforce decorum for the entire courtroom. The stenographer records the proceedings and remains neutral, not enforcing behavior beyond maintaining a quiet recording environment.
