1. Who holds the position of Director of Education for FBLA-PBL?

- A. Karen Heslep
- B. Becky Grant
- C. Lisa Smothers
- D. Carla S. Boulton

The position of Director of Education for FBLA-PBL is held by Carla S. Boulton, whose role involves overseeing educational initiatives and resources for the Future Business Leaders of America and the Phi Beta Lambda organizations. This position is crucial as it ensures that members have access to quality educational programming and resources that align with the goals of the organization. Carla S. Boulton's experience and vision are instrumental in guiding the education strategies that support the development of future business leaders. This context is particularly important for understanding how leadership roles within FBLA-PBL contribute to the overall mission and effectiveness of the organization in providing valuable experiences for its members.

2. How many National Officers does FBLA have?

- A. 7
- B. 10
- C. 8
- D. 9

The correct answer, which indicates that FBLA has nine National Officers, reflects the structure established by the organization. The FBLA National Officer team typically consists of various roles, including President, Secretary, Treasurer, and several Regional Vice Presidents, among others. This set-up promotes a diverse leadership structure that allows for representation from different regions and a variety of voices within the organization. This format not only helps in effective governance but also ensures that a wide range of views and experiences are brought to the decision-making process. Each officer carries specific duties that contribute to the overall mission and vision of FBLA at the national level, enhancing the effectiveness of the organization in serving its members and advancing their interests. As for the other options, while they may represent plausible numbers for various leadership teams in different organizations, they do not accurately reflect the current structure of FBLA's National Officers.

3. In which category of competitive events does the American Enterprise Project fall?

- A. Team Event
- B. Individual Event
- C. Chapter Event
- D. Group Project

The American Enterprise Project is classified as a Chapter Event because it involves the entire chapter working collaboratively to develop a project that promotes understanding of the American enterprise system and encourages business involvement in the community. This event requires members to engage in activities that showcase their chapter's efforts related to entrepreneurship or economic education, with the final presentation often reflecting the collective work and input of the chapter's members. In contrast, team events typically require small groups of participants to compete against others, often focusing on specific tasks or skills. Individual events are designed for participants to demonstrate their knowledge or skills alone. A group project, while it may sound similar to a chapter event, usually falls under a more flexible category that might not specifically emphasize the collective efforts of a chapter as a whole. The distinction lies in the nature of participation, scope of collaboration, and the focus on the chapter's objectives within the American Enterprise Project.

4. Who is the 2025-2026 PA Parliamentarian?

- A. Anish Dachepalli
- B. Mr. Da'Shawn Adams
- C. Miss Alexys Tomlinson
- D. Mr. Anish Dachepalli

The correct answer identifies Anish Dachepalli as the 2025-2026 PA Parliamentarian, reflecting the responsibilities associated with this leadership role within the Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) framework. The Parliamentarian typically ensures that meetings are conducted according to the established rules and procedures, guiding members in parliamentary law to ensure orderly discussions and decision-making. This role is crucial in maintaining the integrity of the organization's processes and fostering effective communication among its members. Anish Dachepalli's selection for this position indicates a recognition of his skills and understanding of parliamentary procedure, making him well-equipped to fulfill the duties expected of a Parliamentarian. His leadership will likely contribute to the collaborative environment necessary for the organization's success. Other candidates might have different roles, but it is Anish Dachepalli's demonstrated capability and position that affirm him as the correct choice for this office.

5. Which of the following is NOT one of the four divisions of FBLA?

- A. FBLA Middle Level
- B. FBLA
- C. PBL
- D. FBLA Adult Division

The answer is D, FBLA Adult Division, because it does not represent one of the official divisions of the Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) organization. The main divisions of FBLA include FBLA Middle Level, which caters to middle school students; FBLA, which is the main organization for high school students; and PBL (Phi Beta Lambda), aimed at post-secondary students. FBLA does include divisions specifically tailored for younger students and those continuing their education beyond high school, but there is no division dedicated to adults as part of the standard framework. Hence, while there might be adult resources or involvement in the organization, the official structure does not classify a specific division for adults. This distinction clarifies why the Adult Division does not fit within the established organizational framework of FBLA.

6. What is the term for the group of individuals elected to represent members of FBLA at the national level?

- A. State Chapter
- B. National Executive Council
- C. Regional Representatives
- D. National Board of Directors

The term for the group of individuals elected to represent members of FBLA at the national level is the National Executive Council. This council is responsible for making decisions, setting policies, and guiding the overall direction of the organization at the national level. Members of the National Executive Council are typically elected by their peers, ensuring that they represent the interests and voices of the broader membership effectively. The representatives serve crucial roles in advocating for the goals of FBLA and bringing attention to the needs and perspectives of local chapters. Their elected status highlights their legitimacy and the trust placed in them by fellow members. This council works closely with the national office and other stakeholders to promote the values and objectives of FBLA, including leadership development, career preparation, and civic responsibility.

7. What was the original sponsoring group for FBLA?

A. National Council for Business Education

B. American Business Association

C. Association of Business Leadership

D. Business Education Network

The original sponsoring group for FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America) was the National Council for Business Education. This organization played a crucial role in establishing FBLA in the 1940s, aiming to enhance student leadership skills and encourage civic responsibility among students pursuing business careers. The council provided the foundational support and resources to develop FBLA into a national organization that focuses on preparing students for the business world through education and networking opportunities. The other groups listed have varying focuses and missions that do not align with the founding vision of FBLA. The American Business Association, for instance, deals more broadly with business interests rather than student development specifically. The Association of Business Leadership and the Business Education Network, while related to business education and leadership, were not involved in the establishment of FBLA as the National Council for Business Education was. Hence, the choice of the National Council for Business Education accurately reflects the organization that originally supported the formation of FBLA.

8. What is the maximum number of pages allowed for a written event, including the front and back cover?

A. 20

B. 30

C. 25

D. 15

The maximum number of pages allowed for a written event, including the front and back cover, is 30 pages. This limit is set to ensure that participants have enough space to present their ideas, research, and findings in a clear and organized manner, while also encouraging conciseness and focus in their writing. Having a fixed page limit helps maintain fairness in competition, as all participants must adhere to the same guidelines. It also allows judges to efficiently review submissions without being overwhelmed by excessive length. The inclusion of the front and back covers in this count reinforces the need for participants to consider the overall presentation of their work. In this context, other numbers, like 20, 25, or 15 pages, are not sufficient for providing the depth of content that is often needed in written events. Therefore, the correct total emphasizes a balance between thoroughness and practicality in written submissions.

9. Which motion is used to ensure clarification on rules or procedures during a meeting?

A. Appeal

B. Parliamentary Inquiry

C. Rescind

D. Commit

The motion used to ensure clarification on rules or procedures during a meeting is the parliamentary inquiry. This motion allows a member to ask the presiding officer questions regarding the rules of parliamentary procedure or the specific rules governing the meeting. It is an important tool for members to seek clarity on how to proceed with the business at hand, ensuring that everyone understands the procedures being followed. This helps maintain order and facilitates effective communication during meetings. In contrast, an appeal is used when a member challenges a decision made by the chair, while rescind pertains to cancelling a previous motion or action. The commit motion, on the other hand, is used to refer a matter to a committee for further study or recommendations. Each of these other motions serves different purposes within the rules of parliamentary procedure and does not specifically focus on clarifying rules during a meeting.

10. At the national level, how many individual and team events is a member allowed to enter?

A. 2

B. 1

C. 3

D. Unlimited

A member is allowed to enter one individual event and one team event at the national level. This policy is designed to ensure that participants can focus their efforts and perform to the best of their abilities in the events they choose, maintaining a balanced competition. By limiting the number of entries to one for individuals and one for teams, FBLA promotes quality over quantity, encouraging members to dive deeply into their preparations and showcase their skills effectively. This structure also fosters collaboration among team members in team events, enhancing the overall learning experience.
