1. What is the chain of command?

- A. The line of authority and responsibility along which orders are passed
- B. A schedule of duty shifts
- C. A list of student rankings
- D. A social hierarchy among students

The chain of command is the line of authority and responsibility along which orders are passed from higher levels to lower levels. It ensures that instructions flow in an orderly way, clarifies who has the authority to make decisions, and identifies who is responsible for carrying out those decisions. In practice, it helps prevent confusion, overlapping duties, and miscommunication by establishing who to report to, who to take directions from, and where to escalate issues. For example, a higher-ranking leader issues a task to a mid-level supervisor, who then directs team members to complete it. Each link knows its responsibility and to whom it reports, keeping the operation coordinated and accountable. This concept is distinct from a schedule of duty shifts, a list of student rankings, or a social hierarchy among students, which describe shifts, performance order, or informal status rather than formal authority and responsibility.

2. Are shoulder boards authorized for wear with the Class B uniform?

- A. Class A Uniform
- B. Class C Uniform
- C. Physical Fitness Uniform
- D. Class B Uniform

Insignia placement rules determine when shoulder boards are worn. On the daily service look, rank is displayed on shoulder boards, so they're authorized with the Class B uniform. The other uniforms either don't use shoulder boards or place rank insignia differently, which is why they don't include shoulder boards. Therefore, shoulder boards are authorized for wear with the Class B uniform.

3. Which rank uses 2 chevrons?

- A. Cadet Private
- B. Cadet Sergeant
- C. Cadet Private First Class
- D. Cadet Corporal

Chevrons on cadet insignia show rank level, and two chevrons identify Cadet Corporal, the first noncommissioned officer rank with leadership responsibilities like guiding a small team. Cadet Private has no chevrons, Cadet Private First Class has one, and Cadet Sergeant has three, so two chevrons best represent Cadet Corporal.

4. Name one Army Leadership Principle.

- A. Always win at all costs.
- B. Ignore feedback.
- C. Never delegate tasks.
- D. Lead by example.

Leading by example, a fundamental Army Leadership Principle, means a leader's actions set the standard for the unit. When you demonstrate the behavior you expect—integrity, competence, accountability, care for soldiers, and composure under pressure—you earn trust and credibility. Soldiers observe how you handle challenges, mistakes, and daily duties, and they imitate that standard, which elevates the whole team and reinforces discipline and mission focus. This is why it's the best choice: it directly channels influence through behavior, not just words, shaping attitude and performance across the ranks. The other approaches conflict with how effective leadership works in practice—seeking victory at any cost can erode ethics and welfare; ignoring feedback blocks learning and adaptability; and not delegating stifles development and overloads the leader.

5. Which of the following statements correctly identifies Flag Day?

- A. Flag Day is celebrated on July 4th.
- B. Flag Day is celebrated on December 7th.
- C. Flag Day is observed on June 14th annually.
- D. Flag Day is observed on January 1st.

Flag Day centers on recognizing the moment the U.S. flag was officially adopted by the Continental Congress in 1777, and it is observed on June 14 each year. This date marks the approval of the Flag Resolution and the flag's formal designation as the nation's emblem. July 4 is Independence Day, celebrating the declaration of independence in 1776; December 7 is remembered for the attack on Pearl Harbor; January 1 is New Year's Day. So observing Flag Day on June 14 annually best identifies this holiday.

6. What does a flag at half-staff signify?

- A. A routine flag status
- B. A celebration of victory
- C. A sign of national mourning
- D. A call to parade

Lowering a flag to half-staff is a symbol of national mourning and solemn remembrance. It's used to honor those who have died and to show respect during times of tragedy or after the death of a public figure. It is not a routine status, not a celebration of victory, and not a call to parade. The flag is raised back to full-staff once the mourning period ends or the commemorative period has passed. Variations exist between countries, but the meaning remains one of respectful remembrance.

7. Why is teamwork essential in military leadership?

- A. It builds trust, safety, efficiency, and mission success.
- B. It reduces the need for leadership.
- C. It ensures individuals work independently.
- D. It replaces individual skill development.

Teamwork in military leadership is about coordinating diverse skills and roles to act as a cohesive unit. Building trust among team members comes from shared training, clear communication, and reliable performance under stress; trust makes operations safer because people anticipate each other's actions and support one another. When trust and communication are strong, tasks are carried out more efficiently, with fewer misunderstandings and delays. All of this culminates in higher mission success because the team can execute complex plans, adapt to changing conditions, and maintain shared situational awareness together. Leadership is the force that cultivates this teamwork—setting expectations, fostering coordination, and developing individuals so their skills complement one another. The other notions don't fit because teamwork does not remove the need for leadership, and it relies on guidance to stay coordinated; it does not promote independence, it emphasizes interdependence; and it does not replace individual skill development, since each member's abilities strengthen the group.

8. Where is the nameplate worn on a female cadet's coat?

- A. 1 to 2 inches above the top button centered horizontally on the right side of the coat.
- B. 1 to 2 inches above the top button centered horizontally on the left side of the coat.
- C. 1 to 2 inches above the top button centered horizontally on the right side of the coat.
- D. 2 to 3 inches above the top button centered horizontally on the right side of the coat.

The nameplate should be worn on the right side of the coat, about 1 to 2 inches above the top button, centered horizontally. This placement keeps the nameplate clearly visible when the coat is buttoned and maintains a balanced, uniform look with other insignia on the uniform. The left side is not the standard position for the nameplate, and placing it 2 to 3 inches high would look out of proportion and disrupt the neat alignment expected on ROTC uniforms.

9. Which objective includes global awareness and a historical perspective of military service?

- A. Provide a global awareness, including a historical perspective of military service
- B. Become a professional athlete
- C. Learn only modern warfare tactics
- D. Focus solely on local community service

Global awareness and a historical perspective of military service broaden a leader's view beyond tactics to why, where, and how the armed forces operate in a larger world and across time. This helps you understand how cultures, politics, and past conflicts shape current missions, international partnerships, and the ethical responsibilities of service. It also equips you to engage with diverse partners and analyze events in a broader context, which is essential for informed leadership. The other options don't fit because they miss that broad, world- and history-facing scope. Becoming a professional athlete isn't connected to understanding military history or global context. Learning only modern warfare tactics leaves out historical development and international considerations. Focusing solely on local community service misses the global and historical dimensions that guide long-term service and leadership.

10. What is the purpose of the Cadet Creed in LET programs?

- A. To set expectations for character, leadership, and service.
- B. To specify uniform regulations.
- C. To outline drill sequences.
- D. To memorize the Sentry General Orders.

The Cadet Creed in LET programs is a statement of the values and commitments cadets strive to embody, and it serves as a guiding compass for how they should act as leaders and team members. Its purpose is to set clear expectations for character, leadership, and service, giving cadets a standard by which they can assess their choices, behavior, and decisions in daily practice and during challenges. By internalizing these ideals, cadets build personal responsibility, integrity, and a sense of duty to others, which strengthens the program as a whole and prepares them for responsible leadership. The other items describe different aspects of training or rules: uniform regulations are covered in dress standards, drill sequences come from marching and drill instruction, and memorizing the Sentry General Orders relates to a separate area of training.
