Explanations

SAMPLE

1. Which code corresponds to an LRC classification that signals the escape of a sentient object equal to or above human intelligence and capable of movement?

A. Blue

B. Superblue

C. Green

D. Amber

The idea being tested is recognizing how escalation codes signal threat level based on an object's intelligence, mobility, and escape risk. When an object is sentient, at least human-level intelligence, and capable of movement, it poses a significant danger because it could actively attempt to break containment. The code that communicates that heightened risk is the one that marks an escalation beyond the ordinary warnings—something stronger than a basic alert. That term, “Superblue,” is designed to indicate a high-threat scenario in which containment must be re-evaluated and intensified due to the potential for the entity to reason, plan, and move to escape. In contrast, the other options represent lower or different kinds of risk: Green and Amber generally denote milder or precautionary statuses, and plain Blue tends to correspond to less severe or non-sentient hazards. They do not specifically convey an intelligent, mobile escape threat at human-like levels, which is why they aren't the best fit for this scenario.

2. Which task force specializes in the acquisition and containment of plant or plant-like anomalous objects and entities, especially fieldwork involving wide-spread infestations of such anomalies?

A. Angle Grinders (MTF Theta-90)

B. Gardeners (MTF Theta-4)

C. Savage Beasts (MTF Eta-11)

D. Skynet (MTF Kappa-10)

The task tests recognizing which unit is specialized in plant-based anomalies and fieldwork with widespread infestations. Gardeners, the Theta-4 team, are built around acquiring and containing plant or plant-like anomalies and handling large-scale infestations in the field. Their focus matches the scenario of dealing with widespread botanical threats, enabling rapid assessment, containment, and neutralization across vast areas. The other teams are tied to different threat types: one is oriented toward mechanical or object-focused operations, another handles animal-like dangers, and another addresses high-tech or AI-related threats. Those fits don't align with plant-focused infestations, so they aren't the correct match for this task.

3. Which SCP number corresponds to the title A Hero is Born?

- A. SCP-990
- B. SCP-1230
- C. SCP-1048
- D. SCP-1471

Think of each SCP entry as a labeled pair: a number and its official title. This question asks which number is paired with the title “A Hero is Born.” The entry that matches that exact title is SCP-1230, so it’s the correct mapping here. The other numbers correspond to different titles, so they don’t fit the given phrase. When studying, it helps to memorize or frequently reference the title-number pairs to build that recognition.

4. Which title is paired with SCP-902?

- A. The Gate Guardian
- B. The Final Countdown
- C. The Living Room
- D. Clef's Pocket Office

Matching SCP numbers to their official titles helps you see how an entry’s name signals its theme. SCP-902 is canonically titled The Final Countdown. The name reflects the story’s central idea—a countdown motif that leads to a dramatic conclusion of the phenomenon described. This pairing is a clear indicator of the object’s nature, tying together the numeric designation with a title that evokes time-running out and impending change. The other options are titles associated with different SCP entries, so they don’t fit 902.

5. Which term is designed for handling artifacts and objects of religious or historical significance?

- A. Reliquary
- B. Research
- C. Dimensional (Dim)
- D. Protected

A reliquary is a vessel specifically built to house and protect sacred or historically significant objects. Its design focuses on preserving, transporting, and displaying items such as bones, clothing, or personal belongings associated with saints or important historical figures. This purpose-driven function—to cradle and honor artifacts of religious or historical value—makes it the clear term for handling such objects. Other options describe activities or general states rather than a dedicated container for sacred or significant items, so they don’t fit the function as precisely.

6. What is the provisional personnel classification applied to field agents and containment personnel exposed to potentially dangerous effects during securing initial containment of a newly-designated anomalous object, entity, or phenomenon?

- A. Class E
- B. Class D
- C. Class F
- D. Class G

Exposure-based provisional classifications are used to flag field personnel who have encountered potentially dangerous effects while securing the initial containment of a newly designated anomalous object, entity, or phenomenon. Class E specifically marks those who have been exposed and may carry a risk of contamination or ongoing effects, triggering protocols for medical evaluation, monitoring, and precautions before they can resume regular duties. This makes it the best fit for the scenario, since the situation centers on exposure and the need to manage associated risk. The other options align with different roles or statuses (for example, D-class are designated as civilian test subjects, not provisional field-exposure tags), or refer to statuses not applicable to this exposure context.

7. Which MTF is described as internal security for the Foundation?

- A. MTF Epsilon-11
- B. MTF Epsilon-6
- C. MTF Eta-10
- D. MTF Zeta-9

Internal security means safeguarding the Foundation from within—monitoring staff, preventing leaks, and responding quickly to internal breaches to keep containment intact. The MTF tasked with this role is Epsilon-11, commonly known as the Nine-Tailed Fox, whose mission centers on rapid internal security response and protecting Foundation operations from insider threats. The other MTFs have different primary duties, such as external operations or containment support, so they don't fit the description of internal security as closely.

8. Which phrase describes the role of MTF Eta-5?

- A. A unit of SCP-3095-1 charged with protecting normalcy after the BE-Class 'Migration' End-of-Consciousness Scenario
- B. An undercover task force tasked with disrupting the research and development of amnestic drugs
- C. A rapid-response unit specializing in the tracking, capturing, and containment of Large-Scale Aggressors
- D. A task force composed of reality bending Foundation personnel from an alternate universe

The main idea here is recognizing that MTF Eta-5 is defined as a fast, mobile response team whose job is to locate, pursue, capture, and contain major threats. This rapid-response focus is what sets Eta-5 apart: they're deployed to confront Large-Scale Aggressors quickly and bring them under control, minimizing widespread harm. The other descriptions describe roles that don't match that urgent, field-led containment mission—for example, covertly interfering with drug development or assembling a unit from an alternate universe—neither of which align with the Eta-5's purpose of swift, decisive action against large, dangerous threats.

9. Which task force specializes in the investigation, acquisition, and containment of auditory and musical anomalies, including auditory cognitohazards or sound-based threats?

- A. Gardeners (MTF Theta-4)
- B. Angle Grinders (MTF Theta-90)
- C. Savage Beasts (MTF Eta-11)
- D. Damn Feds (MTF Iota-10)

Matching threat type to task force specialization is what this item tests. Auditory and musical anomalies, including auditory cognitohazards or sound-based threats, are best addressed by units trained to handle living, fauna-like dangers that can produce or manipulate sound in aggressive ways. Savage Beasts, the Eta-11 team, is established to pursue, capture, and contain dangerous living threats—biological or creature-based anomalies—often encountered in rapid-response situations. Their training and gear are oriented toward subduing mobile, organism-based targets and securing specimens for containment, which makes them the most suitable choice for handling sound-producing or sound-manipulating threats as part of containment operations. Other teams are aligned with different domains (plants, machinery, or non-biological threats), so they're less suited to the specific challenges posed by auditory biological anomalies.

10. Which description corresponds to MTF Eta-4?

- A. A rapid-response unit specializing in the tracking, capturing, and containment of Large-Scale Aggressors
- B. An undercover task force tasked with disrupting the research and development of amnestic drugs
- C. A unit of SCP-3095-1 charged with protecting normalcy after the BE-Class "Migration" End-of-Consciousness Scenario
- D. A task force put forth as a team of foragers meant to destabilize GOI-004

MTF units are organized by mission, so a given designation points to a specific kind of response or containment role. The description that frames Eta-4 as a unit charged with protecting normalcy after a BE-Class "Migration" End-of-Consciousness Scenario, tied to SCP-3095-1, matches that kind of duty precisely. It emphasizes safeguarding ordinary reality in the wake of a consciousness-related anomaly and handling the particular instance or victim involved, which is what Eta-4 is defined to do in this context. The other options describe roles that belong to different kinds of teams or missions—rapidly tracking and capturing large-scale aggressors, undercover disruption of amnestic research, or foraging to destabilize a GOI—none of which align with the specified remit of preserving normalcy after the Migration End-of-Consciousness event.
