Explanations

SAMPLE

1. Voiding of the purchase contract requires that you immediately return what to the customer?

- A. Any down payment
- B. Deposit
- C. Title for a trade-in vehicle
- D. All of the above

Voiding of the purchase contract requires that you immediately return any down payment, deposit, and title for a trade-in vehicle to the customer. This is because voiding the contract means that the transaction is canceled and all terms are reversed. As for the other options, A and B are not sufficient as they only cover parts of the transaction, while C only applies if there was a trade-in vehicle involved. Therefore, option D is the correct answer as it covers all possible scenarios for returning items to the customer when voiding the purchase contract.

2. What is the primary duty of a motor vehicle salesperson?

- A. To manage inventory for the dealership
- B. To sell vehicles and assist customers
- C. To provide mechanical services
- D. To perform financial audits

The primary duty of a motor vehicle salesperson is to sell vehicles and assist customers. This role centers around facilitating the sales process by actively engaging with potential buyers to understand their needs, provide them with relevant information about the vehicles, and guide them through the purchasing process. The salesperson acts as a critical intermediary, ensuring that customers feel informed and supported while making significant decisions regarding the purchase of a vehicle. This includes demonstrating vehicle features, discussing pricing and financing options, and addressing any questions or concerns the customers may have. While inventory management, mechanical services, and financial audits are essential aspects of running a dealership, they fall outside the core responsibilities of a salesperson. The focus is firmly on customer interaction and sales efficacy.

3. Which term is appropriate when indicating that an item comes with a purchased vehicle?

- A. "bundled with"
- B. "included with"
- C. "no cost"
- D. "promo item"

"Included with" is the most appropriate term to use when indicating that an item comes with a purchased vehicle. This indicates that the item is a part of the purchase and is not an additional cost or promotion. The other options could also technically be correct, but they do not accurately convey that the item is specifically tied to the purchase of the vehicle. "Bundled with" could suggest that the item is a part of a larger package deal, "no cost" could imply that the item is a free bonus but not necessarily tied to the purchase, and "promo item" implies that the item is a promotional offer rather than a standard inclusion with the purchase. Therefore, "included with" is the most appropriate and specific term to use in this context.

4. Which phrases are prohibited when advertising a vehicle price?

- A. "below market price"
- B. "name your own price"
- C. "special offer"
- D. "best in the city"

The phrase "name your own price" is prohibited when advertising a vehicle price because it suggests that the seller is willing to negotiate the vehicle's price without any guidelines or limitations. This can be misleading for consumers and can lead to confusion regarding the actual market value of the vehicle. It implies an ambiguity concerning the pricing structure, which regulatory agencies seek to avoid to ensure transparency and fairness in vehicle sales practices. In contrast, phrases like "below market price," "special offer," and "best in the city" may provide a comparison or suggest promotional pricing, but they follow certain advertising rules that are designed to protect consumer interests. These phrases can lead to ambiguous definitions of what is considered "best" or "below market," but they do not imply the same level of customer-driven pricing as the approved phrase does. Therefore, understanding the principles behind vehicle pricing and advertising helps ensure compliance with regulations while also guiding consumers in making informed decisions.

5. What phrases must not be used to describe vehicle pricing in advertising?

- A. "exceed expectations"
- B. "competitive rates"
- C. "below average"
- D. "name your own price"

Some options given show positive aspects when referring to vehicle pricing, such as "exceed expectations" and "competitive rates", while others have a negative connotation, such as "below average". However, "name your own price" does not accurately describe vehicle pricing and can be considered deceptive as it implies the buyer has full control over the price, which is not the case in most cases. Therefore, it should not be used to describe vehicle pricing in advertising.

6. What does a "vehicle history report" disclose?

- A. Only the number of previous owners
- B. Information about ownership, accidents, service records, and title status
- C. Details on the vehicle's manufacturing process
- D. Only the accident history of the vehicle

A vehicle history report provides comprehensive information regarding the vehicle's past, including its ownership history, details of any accidents it has been involved in, service records, and the status of its title. This type of report is valuable to potential buyers as it helps them understand the overall condition and reliability of the vehicle. By outlining the number of previous owners, any reported accidents, and maintenance history, the report offers a complete picture of the vehicle's background, allowing buyers to make informed decisions. The inclusion of title status is also crucial, as it can indicate whether the vehicle has a clean title, has been salvaged, or has any liens against it, all of which can impact its value and safety. Other options focus on more limited aspects of the vehicle's history or irrelevant information. For example, only disclosing the number of previous owners or just the accident history does not provide a full understanding of the vehicle's background, whereas details about the manufacturing process are not relevant to the historical data a buyer would need to consider when evaluating a used vehicle.

7. What does the reasonable care standard require from dealerships?

- A. Review insurance records
- B. Perform a visual and operational inspection
- C. Contact all previous owners
- D. None of the above

The reasonable care standard requires dealerships to perform a visual and operational inspection of the vehicle before selling it to a customer. This means they must thoroughly check and test all parts of the vehicle to ensure it is safe and in good working condition. Option A, reviewing insurance records, may seem like a responsible step for dealerships to take. However, insurance records only indicate if the vehicle has been involved in any accidents or major repairs, and may not necessarily reflect its current condition. Therefore, it is not a sufficient measure for determining if a vehicle meets the reasonable care standard. Option C, contacting all previous owners, may also seem like a logical step for dealerships to take. However, it is not a requirement under the reasonable care standard. Obtaining information from previous owners may provide helpful information, but it is not a substitute for a thorough inspection. Option D, stating that none of the above is required, is incorrect because option B, performing a visual and operational inspection, is in fact required by the reasonable care standard. Dealerships are responsible for ensuring the safety and quality of the vehicles they sell, and a thorough inspection is a crucial aspect of this responsibility.

8. What can you do if your license is denied?

- A. Apply again immediately
- B. File a lawsuit
- C. Hire a lawyer
- D. Appeal to the Division of Hearings and Appeals

If your license is denied, your best course of action would be to appeal to the Division of Hearings and Appeals. Applying again immediately (option A) would not be useful as the decision would likely remain the same. Filing a lawsuit (option B) or hiring a lawyer (option C) would be a potential option, but it would be a longer and more expensive process compared to appealing to the Division of Hearings and Appeals.

9. What does MSRP stand for?

- A. Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price
- B. Motor Sales Retail Price
- C. Motorized Standard Retail Price
- D. Manufacturing Sales Recommended Price

MSRP stands for Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price. It is the price recommended by the manufacturer for a product to be sold at in retail stores. Option B is incorrect because it combines "Motor" and "Retail," which do not relate to the term "Suggested" in MSRP. Option C is incorrect because it uses "Standard" and "Motorized," which are not mentioned in the actual acronym. Option D is incorrect because it combines "Manufacturing" and "Sales," which are not mentioned in the actual acronym.

10. Where must the results of the safety and mechanical defect inspection be shown?

- A. The bill of sale
- B. The inspection certificate
- C. The repair log
- D. The Wisconsin Buyers Guide

The results of the safety and mechanical defect inspection must be shown on the inspection certificate. This certificate serves as an official document that verifies whether a vehicle has passed or failed the inspection, detailing any safety or mechanical issues that may need to be addressed before the vehicle can be legally driven. The inspection certificate is critical in ensuring transparency and safety for both the seller and the potential buyer, providing an accurate record of the vehicle's condition at the time of sale. Other documents, such as the bill of sale, repair log, or Wisconsin Buyers Guide, may provide related information, but they do not specifically contain the detailed results of the inspection in the same way that the inspection certificate does. For instance, while the Wisconsin Buyers Guide may summarize certain aspects of the vehicle and its sale, it does not serve as the official record of the inspection results.
